Finally finding an effective pain solution

After trying a string of products to reduce the visible pain of their calves, Allan and Sharyn Grayson now happily advocate for Tri-Solfen.

Allan and Sharyn Grayson are a husband-and-wife team running a small cattle breeding operation in Queensland. They currently have around 30 breeders, cross breeding English Devon over Angus Bulls, growing calves to 300-350kg and two selling periods per year.

To them, animal welfare is everything.

“We believe in looking after what we have, ensuring the safety, health and well-being of our animals.”

So after seeing their calves struggling after castration – lying around in pain, swishing their tails and showing signs of swelling – they knew they had to find a better solution.

“I hated castrating our calves. I wanted to try different options. I thought about clamps or rings, then did some more research. Our vet suggested something else, but it didn't seem to give the pain relief we wanted. Our calves tend to lose a bit of weight, and it set them back.”

Then, thankfully, Allan read an article about Tri-Solfen in the Queensland Country Life. They bought a bottle, used it during calf castration, and instantly saw the positive effect.

“You see the benefits straight away. We’ve had no setbacks due to pain. My experience is that the bull calves recover very quickly from the procedure, don’t lie around suffering and don’t look back. Plus, there’s hardly any swelling. Would greatly recommend it to anyone.”

A smart investment

While pain was the primary motivator, Allan and Sharyn have been pleasantly surprised by the knock-on financial benefits of making the switch to Tri-Solfen – particularly in solving their weight loss issue post castration.

“Because Tri-Solfen is effective within minutes, the calves mother up quickly and return to normal drinking and grazing.”

As a result of their cattle gaining weight more quickly, the Graysons have enjoyed considerable profit at market.
