Location: Injune, QLD

Operation: Cattle

'An innovative breakthrough in pain relief'.

Sharon and Peter Seawright choose Tri-Solfen for their Santa Gertrudis herd.

Nestled in the middle of 'harder country', in Queensland's Maranoa Region, is the small town of Injune with a population of 461 people. Two of them, Sharon and Peter Seawright, run two nearby cattle farms, Comet Downs and Doo-Mei, together with their son Jarrod, his wife Catie, and daughters Bree and Maddie.

Across 9,500 acres, they run 650 Santa Gertrudis breeders, known for their lovely temperament, softness, fertility, ease of calving, and muscle volume. They also run a cross-breeding operation on Yarrabin, 50km north of Roma, where they integrate Charolais, Braford and a few Brangus breeders.

Primarily selling their 300-350kg weaners through the Roma Store Sale, they also target the feedlotter and background markets, and are broaching a little into Auction Plus and getting a Heifer stud up and running.

With the business branching out in so many different directions, raising heavy, healthy and happy calves was imperative.

A lucky find while flicking through Queensland Country Life.

Around five years ago, it was a chance discovery through a Queensland Country Life article that first put Sharon onto Tri-Solfen.

"I noticed that it had been approved for castration, so I spoke to my vet about it and put in an order shortly after."

Like many farmers, pain relief had been a cause for concern for some time.

"We had tried a number of other products before. In the past, we just had a blue spray and sometimes powder – so we noticed the immediate effect of Tri-Solfen and thought this was fabulous."

"The benefits are outstanding. Less stress on calves, less bleeding, faster healing and easier to mother up after branding."

Sharon describes it as 'innovative breakthrough in pain relief'.

“Previously, after we’d walk calves home after their procedure, they’d want to lie down and there was a risk they’d get left behind. Because of the pain relief, now they just get up and keep moving.”

Spreading the word far and wide.

As with many Tri-Solfen users, the Seawrights were quick to begin sharing their newfound discovery with others.

“I knew someone who wasn’t using it much. Then he saw us using it and couldn’t believe how the blood congealed. He was so surprised, and now he’s been using it ever since. My parents, my brother, my agent, I told them all ‘to take a spare gun and go use it.’”
